Julia’s Testimonial:

“The aim to go to France was to improve my fluency in the French language and expand my knowledge on the French culture.

I well indeed improved my fluency in the French language as well as in Italian and I managed to acquire basic communication skills in Spanish. I feel that I improved my social skills through the work experience. I learnt many new things about France’s culture and history as I had the possibility to visit sites and museums on my days off.

Since I worked in a Tourist Information Office, not only I learnt so many new things on the city and region but it helped me in so many ways. Many tourists visiting the office were francophone so I had to use the language substantially throughout the day. I worked five times a week, constantly talking to people, so even if the tourists were English-speakers, like this I really practiced to express myself well and explain clearly the answers to the questions asked; this is well-needed practice for the job I was studying for which is a Tour Guide. This learning experience was a very successful one since I accomplished my aims and more!”
